Hvor Vesten Begynner Nyheter January 2001

a newsletter for the Fort Worth Lodge 1-654 of Sons of Norway

Velkommen to the 2001 Nyheter Volume Number 1 ; Issue Number 1

New Beginnings

The Fort Worth Lodge is pleased to kick off the millennium with the new nyheter (N, piece of news) to its membership and others interested in the chartering of Texas' new lodge. Our name? What the heck is it? and how do you pronounce it?

Literally hvor=where, vesten= the west, begynner= begins/start. Fort Worth has long been considered "western" with the historic cattle industries and ranch life compared to its sister city to the East, Dallas. Also known as "Cowtown", Fort Worth's attitude is more laid back and relaxed in contrast to the hustle of big city life common in Dallas. Though high-tech and industrial today, Fort Worth remains a place where one enjoys their leisure life and is proud of its "Western heritage". Thus "Where the West Begins" was chosen for our lodge name. Members voted on the name on March 30, 1999 (some without being able to pronounce it, and almost everyone misspelling it for now) because we want to emphasize our culture and heritage (BTW: Cowtown was rejected). In the land where Spanish is so prevalent, we wanted to show our diversity and teach some of the local folk some Norsk!

Oh yeah, you pronounce it [vorr' ves'ten be yen' ner]

Lodge Website on the Internet:

Lodge Meetings

The lodge meets on the 3rd Thursday of the month. Meetings are held in the MacFarland Lounge at St.

Andrew's Episcopal Church in downtown Fort Worth. (If the door is locked, please ring door buzzer). Come join us and become a charter member. Basic dues are $29.00 for individual 12-month membership and $22.00 for a spouse. Heritage Membership (under 12) is free. Gloden/Life Membership (over 65 with 30 years of membership in SofN) is $18.00.

The SofN Trubfrim Partnership

Save those stamps for the Trubfrim Program. The program is run by the Norwegian Health Service to help disabled and needy children from the resale of the stamps to wholesalers and philatelists world wide. If you would like to help, simply clip stamps, leaving at least 1/2 an inch around the stamp or just give the Lodge your envelope and we'll cut them out. For every pound you send, you will be entered into a drawing for round-trip tickets on SAS to Norway. Domestic and foreign stamps need to be separated. They also will accept used pre-paid phone cards.

Lodge's Upcoming Events:

We will have our Second Annual Community Appreciation/PR baked goods give away later this spring. Last year we thanked the St. Andrews Episcopal Church where we meet. This time we have selected the Ronald McDonald House of Fort Worth Texas. Date is still to be determined, please call Cathy or check our website for more information. If you would like to make a donation of time and/or cash contribution contact John.

Past Events:

Not being officially instituted didn't stop us from participating in 2000 Viking Fest in Georgetown. Though it was a lot of hard work and preparation, we did manage to get some money in the treasury and made lots of contacts. Special thanks to Barbara Murphy and especially Cathy and Richard Dickinson. For more pictures of the 2000 Vikingfest look at <http://members.nbc.com/jeberly/Vikingfest/vf1.html>

Two Flags

Two flags will I vow forever be true
Two flags with their colors of red, white, and blue
They glow with a glory of heavenly gloss
In one shine the stars
in the other the cross.
The first is the flag of America's land
The second
the flag of my forefathers' strand;
And fairer than Juno
and brighter than Mars
Shines the flag with the cross and the flag with the stars!

A Little in English

Per Sivle

The Norwegian author Per Sivle, 1857–1904, was born in Aurland, but grew up at Vossestrand where you today find a statue of him. His interest in Norwegian history was awakened while he attended the folk high school in Sogndal. Around 1875, he went to Oslo to study for his examen artium (high school equivalent), but persistent headaches became a hinder in his studies. In 1878, he made his debut with the collection of poetry called “En Digters Drøm” (A Poet's Dream). He worked for several years as the editor of a newspaper in Drammen and later as the editor of Kristianiaposten during the years 1887–91. Sivle became one of the foremost spokespersons for national independence during the years towards 1905, the time toward the dissolution of the union with Sweden. Personally, he suffered from moodiness and struggled constantly with bad health. He left behind numerous collections of poems and stories. One of his most beautiful poems—which most Norwegians will remember from their childhood—is the melancholy lullaby “Den fyrste songen.” [If our readers know of an English translation of the “Den fyrste songen,” the Sons of Norway Heritage Department would be pleased to obtain a copy for later publication in the Newsletter Service]

Den norske forfatter Per Sivle, 1857–1904, ble født i Aurland, men vokste opp på Vossestrand hvor en i dag kan se en skulptur av ham. Hans interesse for norsk historie ble vekket mens han gikk på folkehøgskolen i Sogndal. Omkring 1875 reiste han til Oslo for å lese til artium, men stadig hodepine hindret ham i studiene. I 1878 debuterte han med diktsamlingen En Digters Drøm. Han arbeidet i flere år som redaktør av en avis i Drammen og senere av Kristianiaposten i årene 1887–91. Sivle ble en av de fremste talsmenn for den nasjonale selvstendighetsvilje i årene frem mot 1905, tiden mot unionsoppløsningen med Sverige. Personlig led han av tungsinn og hadde en stadig kamp med sykdom. Han etterlot seg tallrike diktsamlinger og fortellinger. Et av songen.”

Den fyrste songen

by Per Sivle

Den fyrste song eg høyra fekk,
var mor sin song ved vogga;
dei mjuke ord til hjarta gjekk,
og kunde gråten stogga.
Dei sulla meg so undarleg
so stilt og mjukt te sova;
dei synte meg ein fager veg
upp frå vår vesle stova.
Den vegen ser eg enno tidt
når eg fær auga kvila;
der stend ein engel, smiler blidt,
some berre ei kan smila.
Og når eg sliten trøytmar av
i strid mot alt som veilar, eg høyrer stilt frå mor si grav
den song som all ting heilar.

Newsbrief

A Language Dilemma

In the event that Oslo kommune gets exempt from second-language instruction, it could be difficult for Oslo students to become teachers. Teachers must know both bokmål and nynorsk, Norway's two written languages, writes Dagsavisen. The Department of Education will decide whether students in Oslo schools will have only instruction in bokmål. This spring, 97 out of 230 education students at the college in Oslo in Norwegian failed their Norwegian exams. College lecturer Alf Gunnar Eritsland says that the percentage of students failing their exams will grow if students haven't had nynorsk instruction. "One doesn't get worse in their first language by studying a second language, quite the opposite," says Eritsland.

The Nobel Peace Prize

Each year on December 10, the Nobel Peace Prize is awarded in Oslo. It is a solemn and festive occasion with ceremonies taking place in Oslo City Hall. The Norwegian Royal Family, members of parliament and other dignitaries are present. Entertainment is provided by world class performers. But, of course, in the center of the celebration is the laureate. In 1999, the organization Doctors without Borders was honored. Swedish industrialist Alfred Nobel died in 1897, leaving the majority of his considerable wealth to a fund that could award prizes annually to those who had furthered human welfare in specific fields, including peace. In his will, he specified that four of the then five prizes were to be awarded in Stockholm, Sweden, while the Peace Prize was to be presented in Oslo.

Nobels fredspris

Hvert år den 10. desember blir Nobels fredspris utdelt i Oslo. Det er en høytidelig og festlig anledning med seremoni i Oslo Rådhus. Den norske kongefamilien, stortingsmedlemmer og andre rangspersoner er til stede. Underholding blir forestått av artister i verdensformat. Men selvsagt i sentrum av feiringen står nobelprisvinneren. I 1999 var det organisasjonen Leger uten grenser som ble hedret. Da den svenske industriherre Alfred Nobel døde i 1897 etterlot han seg størstedelen av sin meget store formue til et fond som skulle utdele priser hvert år til personer eller organisasjoner som hadde fremmet menneskelig velferd på spesielle områder, her også inkludert fred. I sitt testamente spesifiserte Nobel at fire av de dengang fem prisene skulle utdeles i Stockholm, mens fredsprisen skulle utdeles i Oslo. Og siden 1901 har en komite i Norge hatt æren av å utnevne kandidatene for denne mest prestisjetunge prisen.

Fartein Olav Valen

Fartein Olav Valen was one of the great Norwegian composers of the 19th and 20th centuries. Valen was born in 1887 in Stavanger, Norway. Although Valen did not begin his study of music until he was 19, he was a fast learner and his talents were apparent to his instructors. Valen entered the Oslo Music Conservatory in 1906. He studied under Catharinus Elling. He studied at the Oslo Conservatory for several years, and began his studies of the organ in 1909. Valen was granted an opportunity to study abroad with some of the greatest world famous composers. He moved to Germany and studied under distinguished composers. He attended the music folk school in Berlin from 1909 until 1911. In 1916, he moved to Valevåg and remained there until 1924, when he returned to Oslo. From 1927 until 1936, Valen worked as the inspector for the Norwegian music collection at the University of Oslo's library, and he also taught music theory at the University. In 1938, he returned again to Valevåg. Valen spent the last years of his life here and continued to compose music. He died in 1952. Valen wrote his music in the 12 tone system, a style of composition that originated in Germany and was fostered highly there. He wrote music for orchestra, piano, violin, organ, and chamber music. In 1947, his Senetto di Michelangelo, written in 1932, was entered in the ISCM music festival held in Copenhagen. His other major works included Kirkegården ved havet (1933–1934), Nenia (1932–1933), Trio for fiolin, cello, og klaver (1917–1924), and Ave Maria (1917–1921).

Norwegian Furniture and Interiors

The Norwegian landscape is one of great distances, narrow valleys, and deep fjords, and only in recent times have cities of any size developed. In earlier times, the towns were too small to transmit changing foreign fashions effectively, and outside influence therefore did not make much impact upon the conservative Norwegian peasantry. The result was that national traits had full scope for development in peasant culture, and considerable talent was no rarity in Norwegian craftsmanship. It would seem that the natural scene, with its strong contrasts and extreme differences between summer and winter, made its mark on the people and developed the Norwegian feeling for colour and form.

The town environment was poorer than in other countries. When in the Nineteenth Century style-confusion spread over the world and industrialization was making its first bid to replace handicraft, in Norway it was natural to look to the countryside for new developments. People came to recognize the fresh and direct beauty in village weaving, woodcarving, and floral painting, and the re-acceptance of these values resulted in folk-art dominating contemporary efforts to create a new and artistically satisfying style.

Even in the most modern Norwegian homes, it is unusual not to find at least one small remnant of the country's rural heritage—a bowl, a table, a rose-painted chest of drawers, or a painted dresser. Up until the middle of this century, there was little appreciation of antique farm furniture in the rural areas and much of it was bought up cheaply by city dwellers and dealers. These days, most farmers value their heirlooms—their painted beds, massive tables and rose-painted or stencilled walls—and take good care of them. On some farms, whole interiors can be works of art, because craftsmen not only made furniture but also carved and painted entire rooms, including the bonded timber walls and the ceilings. Many of these 18th-century rooms still survive intact in farmhouses in the valleys and on the lowlands of southern and eastern Norway. Some are still used by the descendants of their original owners. Often, though, the present-day owners have built themselves modern houses next to the old ones, with “luxuries” such as electricity and plumbing.
